

Four Waves of 'Attack'

In what follows I will outline my experience as it unfolded... please make any adjustments to the language (I use the language of demons, demonic, spirits etc) to suit your own situation, but I suggest that there is value in seeing the pattern.

I began to pray into a specific situation that I considered was under considerable threat. As I took it on through consecutive days the direction surprised me, and then I realised that what I was encountering was of a global nature affecting numerous situations. The timing coincided with the very start of the Ukraine invasion by Russia.

I consider that this line of attack will be present at some level through to the spring of 2023.

On my first day, I saw in broad outline that there were 4 strong demons released to exact the strategy. When the first was released and gained the amount of ground necessary that attack would continue and then the second could come out, and so on, until eventually the fourth wave would be released. That really was all I knew on that first day, with some hazy perspective on the four.

By the second day I was convinced that the fourth wave had not yet been released, so that gave me faith (hope?) that there would NOT be released in the Ukraine nuclear nor chemical warfare. This fourth wave would have been one of near total destruction with a combination of financial ruin, serious sickness, marital breakup and havoc. Like a tornado - I simply note this here but I do not believe this was released.

Experiences might be real, or they might be what we experience so that we understand the reality of what lies behind it, but on the third day I literally encountered, not sure who was more shocked, the third wave. At that stage I had no idea why the third was what I encountered first and why not the first wave. (I now understand that it was necessary as it was about reversing a movement / direction that had been released.) As I pursued that spirit literally down a street I realised (thank God) that the third was not sufficiently established so the fourth was not yet in action. This is enormous good news.

The third, I have no adequate name for, and really the name is just to help us get the function. I have never seen one like this before... But before that I jump forward...

The first three waves were coming in 'left of field', so not visible to any normal focus. The first two came in like an arrow to the heart of the movement I was praying for, coming in to act like a wedge. This does not mean they could not go elsewhere but there was a focus on the heart. Once that wedge was effected this third 'spirit' could then go throughout the community / movement.

If you are still with me, a medal awaits you in heaven for your patience!

This third spirit was manifesting in a way that I can best describe as a 'worm'. I turned a corner (most of this praying I do while walking) and literally in front of me it was manifest. Around head height, above the ground and something around 1 metre in circumference, and about 6 metres long (simply describing what I experienced). In the confrontation I believed that it was rendered 'rudderless'; the following day I believe it was left without sight, and I have revisited this scenario a few times to ensure it remained that way.

When meditating on this the phrase 'wormed my way in' came to me. This third wave was to energise those who should not be present to worm their way in, to enable them to enter where they should not have access. (Our battle is not against flesh and blood... but energises flesh and blood where there is a weakness.)

Let me now jump to wave 1. The cycle / waves began with 2 things: jealousy and intimidation.

Jealousy has a root of 'fear of losing one's place'. The result is a shift / challenge to boundaries, boundaries allotted to each person within which they have a godly inheritance. In partnering with intimidation there is something very powerful and sadly very personal.

If wave 1 gained traction and ground the effect was to release wave 2. In this second wave the effect was to make sure that chronos time ('natural' time) did not connect with the opportune time (kairos), thus resisting an inbreaking of God.

In this second wave what I saw partnered together was 'prematurity' and 'delay'. I could not understand this as they are opposites and they should have been on either end of a spectrum. However, they were side by side and even overlapping. Intuitively I knew there was a third 'spirit' somehow hiding behind those two.

I spent a day seeking to pull the two apart and eventually they were forced apart and to my surprise hiding behind them, and holding them together, was 'false wisdom'.

The effect of the false wisdom was either to bring about something premature or to delay the timing. Either way the result was that something would not come to maturity.

False wisdom is not foolishness! In another situation it might actually be wise. It has enough within it (and often in situations Scripture is quoted) to be enticing, but if listened to will bring about a wrong response.

True wisdom might not always appear to wise - Solomon asking for the baby to be cut in half might not be automatically entered into the 'book of practical wisdom'!!

An illustration that more or less shows the sequence and what was involved:

